Non-exercise ways to celebrate Heart Month

The Second City
 NETWORK

Atrá Asdou

» @TheSecondCity

February is American Heart Month! That means we get 29 consecutive days filled with extended periods of prolonged sitting and reading about various cardiovascular and blood vessel diseases—because getting up and doing stuff is hard. To help you get started, here are ways to focus on your heart health that require doing very little with your body.

Engage in some Facebook rage

Breaking up a fight on the street would involve being in decent physical shape—and that's just too risky. Since one out of every four Americans dies of heart disease, it's safest to prevent a heart attack by taking your vigilante prowess to the Internet from the safety of your home. Read posts from Donald, Hillary, Ted and Bernie supporters and have at it. You'll get plenty worked up while remaining sweat-free. When's the last time you heard about someone dying from over-trolling?

Women be blood-pumpin'

If you've recently joined a Zumbacise-Acro-Aqua-Yoga-Spinning class, quit it. Immediately. Instead, spend that time reading up on how products marketed toward women are more expensive than those same products geared toward men via the "Woman Tax." Yup. Dry cleaning. Deodorant. Shaving cream. They cost women more. You're probably already in the fat-burning heart rate zone just from reading that.

Quit smoking

Trying extremely hard to look cool can take a toll on the psyche. It's shown that negative emotions can trigger bad heart health. Do your ticker a solid: Ditch the cigarettes and start vaping. You won't ever have to worry about looking cool again.

Avoid being caught red-handed

Did you celebrate National Wear Red Day on Feb. 5? Cool. Wearing special clothes to support cardiovascular disease research might do wonders for the human spirit, but it does nothing to actually prevent death. Don't give up, though! Combine your desire to proudly show your support with maintaining a quick heart rate with three little words: Smash. And. Grab. Simply steal wearable red items from any store. The subsequent adrenaline rush will do wonders for sustaining a bout of tachycardia!

Try a little Tinder-ness

By Feb. 15, you'll have spent all your money attempting to buy love. This will inevitably leave you completely heartbroken. Resuscitate yourself with a little emergency TLC: Tinder, laziness and credit cards.

Work out ... in your mind

Trainers sometimes mention that it's not enough to just go through the motions during an exercise—you gotta activate the muscles you're working on by focusing on them. The cardiovascular system is no exception! Work the following into your everyday run-to-the-bus race:

- 1) Close your eyes. 2) Focus. 3) Imagine your cardiovascular muscle is a sinewy butt doing deep squats. 4) Now go catch that bus.

Really, what is exercise but induced physical stress? You can get all the same benefits without ever employing actual fitness. Stay healthy, and take comfort in knowing that absolutely none of this has been approved by the American Heart Association.

Cop sues estate of teen he killed, claiming trauma

By Jeremy Gornier and Gregory Pratt

CHICAGO TRIBUNE

A Chicago police officer who fatally shot a 19-year-old college student and accidentally killed his neighbor has filed a lawsuit against the teenager's estate, arguing the student's actions prompted the shooting and caused the officer "extreme emotional trauma."

Officer Robert Rialmo's lawsuit was filed Friday amid Mayor Emanuel's efforts to win back public trust in the Chicago Police Department following the release of video last fall of an officer shooting to death 17-year-old Laquan McDonald on Oct. 20, 2014, and other cases of alleged police misconduct.

Rialmo's lawsuit provides the officer's first public account of the Dec. 26 shooting in West Garfield Park. It says Rialmo opened fire after Quintonio LeGrier twice swung a bat at his head at close range, and LeGrier

Robert Rialmo

Quintonio LeGrier

Bettie Jones

was shot when Rialmo saw him raising the bat again and thought LeGrier could kill him if LeGrier hit him in the head with the bat.

LeGrier's father, Antonio LeGrier, had filed a wrongful death lawsuit saying his son wasn't a threat, and Rialmo's lawsuit, which asks for

"After this coward shot a teenager in the back ... he has the temerity to sue him? That's a new low for the Chicago Police Department."

—Basileios Foutris, Antonio LeGrier's attorney damages of more than $180,000, plus court and attorney fees, is a countersuit in that case. Rialmo also fatally shot Antonio LeGrier's neighbor Bettie Jones, 55, in the confrontation, but police have said her death was accidental.

Antonio LeGrier's attorney, Basileios Foutris, was incredulous at what he called the officer's "temerity" in suing the college student's grieving family. Foutris said the lawsuit was "outlandish."

"After this coward shot a teenager in the back ... he has the temerity to sue him? That's a new low for the Chicago Police Department," Foutris said.

Rialmo's lawyer, Joel Brodsky, said Saturday that his client is going through a grieving process that officers experience whenever they fatally shoot someone.

"He's got this extra added burden [with] the death of Jones," Brodsky said. "He's going through what I would call the normal grieving process for someone who is forced to take a human life."

Last week, interim police Superintendent John Escalante told the Tribune that Rialmo's administrative duties were extended indefinitely.

NOW'S THE PERFECT TIME TO START SIZING UP THE 2016 BEARS

WHO'S FEELING FOX-TIMISTIC?

RedEye

With any luck—OK, a lot of luck—the Bears will be in Super Bowl 51.

How beautiful would it be to see John Fox's team hoist the Lombardi Trophy in Houston next February? Anything can happen in the NFL, right? After all, Fox needed just three years upon being hired as Denver's coach to reach the Super Bowl and only two as Carolina's head honcho to do the same.

Well, not to be a buzzkill, but it might not be that simple. To forecast the Bears' 2016 season and beyond, RedEye asked football experts:

If we set the over/under on the Bears' next Super Bowl appearance at three years, which would you take and why?

Some were more optimistic than others.

OVER

Anthony Adams

former Bears defensive lineman

I would take the over on this bet. We gotta make it to the playoffs first.

Brad Biggs

Chicago Tribune

Over. You can't rule out the Bears reaching the sport's biggest stage within the next three years, but they've got some heavy lifting to do to become a playoff contender. It's been five years since they reached the postseason, and they need to set their sights on improving their record within the NFC North before they dwell on bigger goals like the Super Bowl. This roster needs an influx of young talent before the Bears will be able to launch a deep playoff run.

Rich Campbell

Chicago Tribune

I'd take the over and then double my bet. Who will the Bears' quarterback be in 2019? Not Jay Cutler. They have significant uncertainty at the most important position. AND they need at least two more plentiful drafts to fill their many holes. Not only that, but Packers quarterback Aaron Rodgers is signed through 2019 and likely to play longer. So I'd take that over straight to the bank.

Jeff Dickerson

ESPN Chicago

I would take the over. John Fox has a pretty good track record of taking teams to the Super Bowl, but the Bears have missed the playoffs five straight years and eight of the past nine seasons. Basically, the Bears organization almost always finds a way to screw it up. They cannot sustain success. I think making the playoffs with Fox in under three years is feasible, but I can't see this team seriously challenging for the NFC championship anytime soon.

Laurence Holmes

670-AM The Score

Bears viewing can sometimes happen in a vacuum. We get stuck looking at whether they're improving in relation to past regimes and not so much the rest of the league. Watching the playoffs was valuable to me in that regard. Looking at the top of the NFC, the Bears have so far to go. It really makes you wonder what would've happened had they hired Bruce Arians three years ago. Let's take Seattle, Carolina and Arizona out of it for a minute and just look at the NFC North. This Packers team that got into the playoffs was one of the worst that we've seen in a decade. They couldn't protect A-A-Ron Rodgers. Jordy Nelson was gone and the rest of the receiving corps couldn't catch the ball consistently. That team still won 10 games. The Vikings have playmakers on each level of their defense: Linval Joseph, Anthony Barr and Harrison Smith. They have a developing quarterback in Teddy Bridgewater, who strangely looked better when Adrian Peterson wasn't available (weird, right?). Ryan Pace is still an unknown as a talent evaluator. His draft picks seemed OK, but the free agency moves were lacking. I've always felt that this process was going to take a minimum of four good years of drafting to undo the last few years of Jerry Angelo and the Phil Emery experiment. The talent gap is so cavernous for the Bears that three years seems optimistic. I'll take the over.

David Kaplan

Comcast SportsNet Chicago

The Bears are a long way from thinking Super Bowl. They need to stack three drafts on top of one another and make a few more smart signings in free agency. Plus, Jay Cutler can't revert to his play before the 2015 season that had Bears fans saying, "Jay Cutler makes me drink."

Dionne Miller

ABC 7

Take the OVER! Look, I am as optimistic as they come, and I believe in John Fox when it comes to turning teams around, but NFC Champs in three years or less?! No way. Too many questions, namely if good Jay Cutler of 2015 is here to stay. Not to mention, who's the starting running back? Are the receivers healthy? Can Cutler mesh with another new coordinator? Plus, the defense is a long way from dominant; just ask Vic Fangio. They may be on the right path, but a Super Bowl is easily four to five years out.

Rick Strom

120 Sports

I cannot believe I'm writing this, but I would rather this question be asked of the Cubs. Two of John Fox's former teams are in the Super Bowl this year. Jay Cutler had his best campaign under a coach that is no longer employed by the team and the Bears defense, in the past three seasons, has finished ranked 14th, 30th, 30th. Ryan Pace has solidified optimism at this point, but Super Bowl optimism? I'll take the over in a landslide.

Joseph Tanksley

RedEye contributor

It is going to take at least three years, if not more, for the Bears to make it back to the Super Bowl. The focus and energy have to be placed on drafting the right players as well as player development to make that a possibility. The Bears have a major lack of talent, and they've only just begun on the major overhauls the roster is going to need to close that gap with the top teams in the league, especially on the defensive side of the ball. Both teams in Super Bowl 50 had multiple impact players on defense, and it's going to take years of good drafting to reach that point.

Dan Wiederer

Chicago Tribune

Look, the Bears have three playoff wins the past 20 seasons. They have a 4-14 record in the division since coach Lovie Smith was dismissed. They've finished dead last in the NFC North the past two seasons and sent only one player (offensive lineman Kyle Long) to the Pro Bowl this year. It's one thing to feel good about the direction the franchise appears headed in under coach John Fox and general manager Ryan Pace. It's another thing altogether to even mention the Bears and the Super Bowl in the same breath.

Israel Idonije

former Bears defensive lineman

I'll take the under. The beautiful thing about this game is that with the right leadership and a few key pieces, you can turn things around quickly. We are back on track, so in three years we'll be there.

Patrick Mannelly

former Bears long snapper

I'm going under because that's what John Fox does. He did it with Carolina and Denver.

teams around, but NFC Champs in three years or less?! No way. Too many questions, namely if good Jay Cutler of 2015 is here to stay. Not to mention, who's the starting running back? Are the receivers healthy? Can Cutler mesh with another new coordinator? Plus, the defense is a long way from dominant; just ask Vic Fangio. They may be on the right path, but a Super Bowl is easily four to five years out.

Rick Strom

120 Sports

I cannot believe I'm writing this, but I would rather this question be asked of the Cubs. Two of John Fox's former teams are in the Super Bowl this year. Jay Cutler had his best campaign under a coach that is no longer employed by the team and the Bears defense, in the past three seasons, has finished ranked 14th, 30th, 30th. Ryan Pace has solidified optimism at this point, but Super Bowl optimism? I'll take the over in a landslide.

Joseph Tanksley

RedEye contributor

It is going to take at least three years, if not more, for the Bears to make it back to the Super Bowl. The focus and energy have to be placed on drafting the right players as well as player development to make that a possibility. The Bears have a major lack of talent, and they've only just begun on the major overhauls the roster is going to need to close that gap with the top teams in the league, especially on the defensive side of the ball. Both teams in Super Bowl 50 had multiple impact players on defense, and it's going to take years of good drafting to reach that point.

Dan Wiederer

Chicago Tribune

Look, the Bears have three playoff wins the past 20 seasons. They have a 4-14 record in the division since coach Lovie Smith was dismissed. They've finished dead last in the NFC North the past two seasons and sent only one player (offensive lineman Kyle Long) to the Pro Bowl this year. It's one thing to feel good about the direction the franchise appears headed in under coach John Fox and general manager Ryan Pace. It's another thing altogether to even mention the Bears and the Super Bowl in the same breath.

Israel Idonije

former Bears defensive lineman

I'll take the under. The beautiful thing about this game is that with the right leadership and a few key pieces, you can turn things around quickly. We are back on track, so in three years we'll be there.

Patrick Mannelly

former Bears long snapper

I'm going under because that's what John Fox does. He did it with Carolina and Denver.

NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell during the 2015 NFL Draft at the Auditorium Theatre in Chicago. CHRIS SWEDA/TRIBUNE FILE

Former Bear's family slams Goodell remarks

By Rich Campbell | CHICAGO TRIBUNE

The son of late Bears safety Dave Duerson joined the chorus criticizing Roger Goodell for how the NFL commissioner recently compared risks of playing football to "risk in sitting on the couch."

Goodell was widely panned after his pre-Super Bowl news conference Friday for alluding to childhood obesity in response to a question about whether he feels comfortable encouraging parents to steer their children toward football in light of seven high school players who died last season because of injuries suffered in games or practices.

Tregg Duerson was among those who took offense. His father, who played for the Bears for seven of his 11 NFL seasons, committed suicide in 2011 at age 50 and was posthumously diagnosed with chronic traumatic encephalopathy (CTE).

"Comparing the CTE risk that NFL players face with an apparently inherent risk in sitting on the couch is an insult to the men affected by CTE," Duerson said in a statement Sunday morning. "These men and their families deserve better. The commissioner and the owners should be displaying empathy, not insensitively minimizing the severity of long-term brain damage."

Goodell said Friday that if he had a son he would encourage him to play football. He called the high schoolers' deaths "tragic" and cited them among the motivations for the league's continued investment in programs that teach safer tackling techniques. He proceeded to extol values learned from playing the sport, including discipline, teamwork and perseverance.

"There is risk in life," Goodell said. "There is risk in sitting on the couch."

THE MOUTHWATCH

"Sure, it's scary. He took off. He heard a pop. You expect the worst when you hear that. ... But anytime the ligaments are intact, it's a relief."

—Bulls coach Fred Hoiberg, on Jimmy Butler's knee injury, which he suffered Friday

THE DIGIT

$2.5M

That's how much Seattle running back Marshawn Lynch will owe the Seahawks if he retires. The amount represents part of his signing bonus, which Lynch will forfeit if he walks away without playing next season. He is contemplating the move, according to ESPN's Adam Schefter.

Aquarius Jan. 20–Feb. 18
A New Moon in your sign on Monday signals a personal fresh start. It's possible that you'll meet someone new in the next few weeks. Be open.

Pisces Feb. 19–March 20
Expect to participate in at least one fun social event with your partner, or throw your own dinner party. You'll be the hosts with the most!

Aries March 21–April 19
If you thought that sexy pal of yours has permanently relegated you to the "friend zone," you might want to think again.

Taurus April 20–May 20
This is your week for love. Jupiter is nestled comfortably in your true love sector, which means romantic prospects will truly delight.

Gemini May 21–June 20
Joint finances will be a hot topic for you and your partner this week. Thankfully, it appears that there's wonderful news on the horizon.

Cancer June 21–July 22
Your love life could not get any sweeter this week. If you're hoping for a special Valentine's treat, you're in luck.

Leo July 23–Aug. 22
If you're single, a New Moon on Monday might support meeting someone new and quickly going exclusive. An open mind is the key to a fulfilled heart.

Virgo Aug. 23–Sept. 22
This is the final week of Venus touring your true love sector, so be sure to make the most of dating opportunities and moments with your sweetheart.

Libra Sept. 23–Oct. 22
If you're single, pay attention to that person who isn't typically your type, and give him or her a shot.

Scorpio Oct. 23–Nov. 21
The key to your love life this week is to maximize social opportunities. If a someone offers to set you up on a date, accept.

Sagittarius Nov. 22–Dec. 21
It's possible that your love life will help you professionally. It's all about who you know, and it appears that your lover may know someone who matters.

Capricorn Dec. 22–Jan. 19
On Wednesday, there might be a spiritual connection between you and your mate that allows your relationship to reach new heights. Wow!

J-LO FOREVER

If you're wondering if we'll have more Jennifer Lopez on the small screen, then the answer is yes. NBC has renewed "Shades of Blue" for a second season, according to avclub.com. The show also is apparently one of the most time-shifted shows currently on air, meaning that a lot of people are watching it delayed and digitally, The A.V. Club reported. This gives us hope that same-day viewing won't determine what gets renewed. But hey, can we please bring back "Happy Endings" already?

$11.4M

That's how much money Ethan and Joel Coen's "Hail, Caesar!" made this weekend, the worst wide opening of the brothers' directing career, according to thr.com. Box office debuts were just generally sad this weekend, as "Pride and Prejudice and Zombies" opened to $5.2 million and "The Choice" made $6.1 million. Womp womp.

THE QUOTE

"It was like I didn't realize how much I missed her ... it was nice to sort of see an old friend."

—Liza Weil, to E! News, about her return to "Gilmore Girls" for the upcoming Netflix revival. Weil will return to the show for two episodes as her character, Paris. We love to hate her, but we're glad she's back.

It's happening, y'all

The cast and crew of NBC's "Friday Night Lights" are reuniting this summer, and it's happening on a Texas football field. The reunion, happening 10 years after the show premiered, is set to include a "Panther Field" meet-up with a pep rally, live music, tailgating and photo ops, with participants who will be announced later, according to ew.com. The reunion will be part of the ATX Television Festival based in Austin, Texas. Woohoo.

Welcome, 'Star Wars'

"Star Wars: The Force Awakens" has officially passed the $2 billion mark. According to ew.com, Disney reported that the recent movie in the "Star Wars" franchise hit $2 billion worldwide Saturday, making it the third film in history to make that amount, joining "Titanic" and "Avatar." The movie has also hit $900 million domestically, becoming the only film in history to do that, EW reported.
